

Landscape Architecture

BRIGHAM YOUNG HISTORIC PARK

Salt Lake City, Utah

1 Acre

Scope. Landscape
Architecture showing Pioneer Sculptures in period activities.

Completion. 1999

The Brigham Young Historic Park design focuses on the utilization of water from City Creek by early settlers. It provides the visitor an opportunity to enjoy flowing water, shade trees, flowering shrubs, sandstone walls, historic features, and a dramatic remembrance of an earlier era. Rock gardens nestled into the slopes of the park provide a dramatic backdrop to the waterwheel that symbolizes the industrial efforts of the early settlers. In addition, the park includes life-size bronze statues, by artist Peter Fillerup depicting men, women and children working and playing in harmony with the water and landscape. The use of these sculptures provides an interactive relationship between the visitor and the park.